

Renaissance of Annandale Names Jessica Peters as Executive Director

West Springfield resident and 15-year health and memory care veteran specializes in person-centered care for those affected by dementia.

ANNANDALE, Va. (January 7, 2021) – Renaissance of Annandale, a premier memory care community the Fairfax County, Virginia area, has named Jessica Peters, a 15-year healthcare veteran with a track record of advancing the quality of life for dementia patients, as its executive director.

In her new role, Peters, a West Springfield resident, will oversee the day-to-day operations and big-picture goals of the memory care community, with a focus on implementing a person-centered care approach for optimal quality of life for each individual resident.

“Jessica is genuine, thoughtful in her work, and has years of experience caring for those affected by dementia. We know that the impact of her work will be felt by our residents and team members, and we’re excited for her to settle in at Renaissance of Annandale,” said Jason Gibson, Vice President of Operations of Legacy Senior Living, the Cleveland, Tenn.-based management company of Renaissance of Annandale.

Peters, whose professional background has focused on resident engagement and quality of life for dementia patients, has served in roles ranging from administrator at assisted living and memory care facilities to recreation therapy program manager with the U.S. Marine Corps Wounded Warrior Battalion.

“Working with those affected by dementia is very close to my heart,” said Peters. “I look forward to working alongside residents, families and team members at Renaissance of Annandale to ensure the best possible home environment for our residents,” she added.

Peters earned a Bachelor of Science in Therapeutic Recreation & Recreation Management from Brigham Young University, with a minor in Gerontology. She went on to earn a Masters of Business Administration in Healthcare Management from Western Governors University.

Peters is a Licensed Assisted Living Facility Administrator, a Certified Dementia Practitioner, a Certified Therapeutic Recreation Specialist, and a Dementia Friend Champion Master Trainer.

A native Virginian, Peters currently resides in West Springfield with her husband, three children, and dogs, Pearl and Tillie. She is an avid outdoor enthusiast and regular volunteer, giving her time and expertise to organizations like Food For Others, the Arlington Food Assistance Center, the USMC Division of the Warrior Games, and various long-term care communities, where her dogs join her in offering pet therapy to residents.
