HarborChase Memory Care of North Collier County has recently announced that two of its valued associates, Stephanie Bennett, Director of Memory Care and Megan Kennedy, Executive Director, have received the Certified Dementia Practitioner (CDP) certification. The CDP certification is recognized by the National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners and denotes specialized training in the areas of Alzheimer's and memory disorders, a very beneficial credential for those currently working in the healthcare field as the dementia population continues to rise.

CDP certified healthcare professionals are able to better recognize and care for individuals living with Alzheimer's and memory disorders. With CDP education and training, they can provide additional support to both patients and their families by effectively reducing the risk for injury to patients, providing patients with appropriate activities according to their needs, and providing an increased level of care and comfort to end stage patients specifically suffering from Alzheimer's and dementia. A CDP certified professional brings security and comfort to affected families by ensuring that their loved one is being cared for by skilled, competent healthcare staff.
