

Blog Home
Back to Corporate

MADE IN AMERICAN HOUSE

Recent Posts

American House Honors Our Own Tuskegee Airman

More seniors are joining online, but what's there to do? Here's 4 of our favorites:

4 ways to keep your senior loved ones looking – and feeling – their best

American House Ranked Among Top 1% of Care Providers Nationwide

American House Offers Certified Dementia Practitioner to Help Families and Staff Members

Recent Comments

americanhouse on 4 Ways to Bring More Gratitude into Your Life

Linda on 4 Ways to Bring More Gratitude into Your Life

americanhouse on Top 10 Principles to Look for When Choosing a Senior Living Community

Kate on Top 10 Principles to Look for When Choosing a Senior Living Community

americanhouse on Resident Activities Impact Several Generations

Archives

February 2014

January 2014

December 2013

November 2013

October 2013

September 2013

August 2013

July 2013

June 2013

May 2013

April 2013

March 2013

February 2013

Tag Archives: National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners

American House Offers Certified Dementia Practitioner to Help Families and Staff Members

Posted on January 7, 2014 by americanhouse

Having a loved one with dementia is tough. Having someone around who truly understands all sides of the effects of the decline in mental ability — for the afflicted, their family and caretakers — is absolutely necessary. At American House, we are proud to have someone who can help: Angie Kadowaki, our corporate life enrichment director and certified dementia practitioner.

Angie received her designation from the National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners after meeting several qualifications: She had to have a college degree; a minimum of five years of experience in a health-related field; a minimum of three years of experience presenting in services or seminars to health care professionals; and have numerous hours in the field before she could qualify for the extensive training program.

Part of Angie's training means she is now able to offer family members a game plan on how to visit their loved one and not feel so sad and how to share moments in time with them. She provides valuable insight on how to communicate with someone who has dementia, how to make them more comfortable and how to make the journey less painful for family members. If you have a loved one with dementia, you know it can be hard to know what to do and say.

Angie offers some tips for families coping with these issues:

"The best advice I would have for any family members is do what you need to do to enter their world," Angie said. "Don't expect them to become part of yours anymore. If you enter into their world, their reality, it's so much easier for the family members and the person they love."

This may seem a bit awkward at first, but you'll soon catch on to the best ways to enter your loved one's new world.

Says Angie: If your loved one says they are wearing a purple shirt when they are really wearing a blue shirt, don't argue with them. Let it go. Trying to correct a loved one with dementia is lose-lose, she says.

"What have you gained by arguing over that?" she says. "You've created distrust."

Angie said it helps to remember that family members are being invited on the loved one's journey. Some key phrases to keep in mind:

- "I can't fix this."

January 2013
December 2012
November 2012
October 2012
September 2012
August 2012

Categories

Caregivers
News & Views
Residents
Resources
Testimonials

Join us on

Subscribe via email

- "I'm sorry it's so painful."
- "Let me help you along the way."

In addition, Angie is now able to conduct seminars with American House staff about thoughtful ideas on how to address the needs of Alzheimer's and dementia patients.

AMERICAN HOUSE UNDERSTANDS DEMENTIA

The American House Elmwood and Regent Street communities are official memory care communities, but Angie said training is offered throughout all American House communities for family members who have loved ones with dementia.

Anyone is welcome to call Angie at (248) 496-1791 with any questions regarding dementia.

To schedule a tour of any of our communities, call us at (248) 579-4422 or visit www.americanhouse.com.

Posted in Resources | Tagged American House, american house elmwood, dementia, elderly, memory care, michigan, National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners, regent street, senior care, Senior Living, west bloomfield | Leave a reply

© 2012 American House Senior Living

*Emergency response systems and other medical and personal support services provided onsite 24/7 by a Medicare certified home health care agency not affiliated with American House. Hospice care provided onsite by local hospice organizations upon resident or family request.

Lifestyle | Amenities & Service | Affordability | About Us | Resources | Foundation | Employment
Site Map | American House Senior Living Privacy Policy

Local Marketing Solutions

