

Easily find information on over 10,000 New England service providers to answer your caregiving questions.

Start Your Search Click Here

- Latest News: Nearly 9 in 10 doubt Obama, GOP can break gridlock
- Latest News: Woman celebrates 110th birthday
- Latest News: Medicare Advantage enrollment deadline looms
- Latest News: GOP senators to hold up Social Security nominee
- Latest News: New Medicaid rule could challenge state shift from nursing homes
- Latest News: Advocates urge Gov. Patrick to spare vulnerable seniors

Categorized | Caregiving Tips

4440624

Preparing for the loss of a dementia sufferer

Posted on 02 February 2015. Tags: Dementia, grief, loss

By Micha Shalev

From many years in this business I found out way too often that adult children caring for a parent diagnosed with dementia and/or Alzheimer's disease are ill prepare for the death of their loved one.

It is a very difficult topic to address even as an administrator of a rest home facility.

"We prepare more for a vacation than we do for loss and death," said Shelley Whizin, a certified death midwife who spoke last year on the topic at a Motion Picture & Television Fund women's conference in Los Angeles.

Laurel Lewis, a nurse and end-of-life expert also on the program, believes "loss can be complicated. It's not just physical separation, but also emotional and spiritual. Usually there's a financial component. You are vulnerable, confused, scared and forced to make big life decisions in an altered state."

On the other hand, Lewis notes, "If you tie things up before the loss, you can live your life more fully and the grieving process may be shorter than if you were in denial."

When we know someone is going to die there it is sometimes accompanied by anticipatory grief. Like the sadness you experience after a death, you may feel depression, anger, guilt, fear, sadness and denial. The "good" part about it is that there's time to do and say the things you want. You can plan, and you should.

Here are some ways to prepare:

1. Conserve your energy. Rather than be barraged by phone calls and emails from friends and family seeking an update, communicate just one time. It could be a conference call, or a website like CaringBridge. Another site, Lotsa Helping Hands, lets caregivers post the help they need and others sign up for duties. You might also want to create a family website and divvy up jobs. One sibling can make sure all documents are in order and have a master list of passwords, while another can research funeral arrangements.
2. Take cues from the one who is ill. Some people want to talk about what they're going through, or what happens after.
3. Seize the opportunity. You want to feel that you have done everything you can for your loved one and for yourself. Do you need to say thank you, I forgive you, I'm sorry, or I love you?
4. Be good to yourself. Caregivers are always told this, but if you are able to sleep, eat well, exercise, and/or find a place to vent, you will be in better shape to cope. Support groups, meditation, yoga and short breaks

Do you need a
CAREGIVING RESOURCE anywhere in New England?

Popular Latest Comments

Six tips to Jump start weight loss in the new year
January 20, 2011

Age no barrier in enjoying life to the fullest
August 26, 2010

Clutter or hoarding, an over packed house messes up your life
April 20, 2010

that may include a pedicure or coffee with a friend are good ways to think about you.

5. Don't wait for the funeral. You can say all these wonderful things about the person after he or she is gone. But what about telling that person before he or she dies? You can make a video of the people in the person's life talking about how they feel about him or her. Then share it with that person.

Three days before Whizin's best friend died, she arranged to have eight of the woman's dearest friends fly in from around the country to gather around her "and talk about how much they love her while she could hear them, not at a service when she won't be around," said Whizin. "We were all so grateful to have this opportunity. It eased the pain. We wanted her to know that she had made a huge impact on our lives."

Micha Shalev MHA CDP CDCM CADDCT is the owner of Dodge Park Rest Home and The Adult Day Club at Dodge Park located at 101 Randolph Road in Worcester. He is a graduate of the National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners program, and well-known speaker covering Alzheimer's and Dementia training topics. He can be reached at 508-853-8180 or by e-mail at m.shalev@dodgepark.com or view more information online at www.dodgepark.com

← Happy 60th anniversary to an inspirational couple

Going smoke free in senior housing has legal support →

Leave a Reply

Name (required)

Mail (will not be published) (required)

Website

Massachusetts' most comprehensive Elder Care Resource Guide!

(click here to view the most recent edition)

YOU ARE READING THE MESSAGE IN THIS AD SPACE!

Wouldn't you rather over 20,000 visitors to this site were reading "your business" message instead?

(Click here to see our very reasonable ad rates.)