Complimentary Staff In-Service Training Available Now Until March 15th, 2015 For Health Care Professionals On Topics Ranging From Elder Abuse To Sexuality And Intimacy

NCCDP / ICCDP Alzheimer's Disease And Dementia Care Staff Education Week February 14th To 21st

SPARTA, N.J., Nov. 24, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- You can't read a paper, blog, social media outlet or online media without seeing an article addressing topics regarding dementia and the older population. As the number of dementia cases continue to increase nationally and worldwide, there is a great necessity to ensure that care givers, front line staff and health care professionals are well trained to provide appropriate, competent, sensitive direct care and support for the dementia patient. The goal of the NCCDP / ICCDP is to develop and encourage comprehensive dementia education, standards of excellence in the health care profession and compassionate delivery of dementia care services by health care professionals and front line staff. The issues facing the health care industry are complex and diverse which include sexuality and intimacy.

The complimentary tool kit includes:

Currently there are no national or international standards regarding dementia education for all health care professionals, front line staff and first responders regardless of the industry they serve. President Obama passed The National Alzheimer's Plan (NAPA) that went into effect in 2012, which as one of its components will address dementia education. Also at the federal level, CMS sent Nursing Homes dementia education tools for CNA's training but a facility can elect to use any training system they wish. Currently, the regulations for dementia education are different from state to state and for each industry. The NCCDP / ICCDP recommends at minimum an initial 12 hours of dementia education for all staff. Throughout the year, additional dementia education should be provided that incorporates new advances, regulatory updates, culture changes, sexuality and intimacy as well as innovative ideas. The NCCDP / ICCDP made it easy for the educators and in-service directors by providing prepared complimentary staff in-services to download.

The NCCDP / ICCDP promote initial live dementia education and CDP certifications of all staff who qualify as Certified Dementia Practitioners (CDP®). The NCCDP / ICCDP recommends that, at minimum, there should be one Certified Dementia Practitioner® per-shift. The NCCDP / ICCDP recommends that every health care organization have a trained and certified Alzheimer's disease and dementia care instructor CADDCT® certified by the NCCDP / ICCDP who will utilize up to date NCCDP / ICCDP training materials.

Caregivers are now asking if the staff has completed dementia education and the amount of education the staff have received. They are now asking if you employ CDP's. Many companies now add the CDP credential as part of the job description and it is now included in the hiring practices for many disciplines. The CDP certification and dementia trained staff have become an important marketing aspect of services offered by a company and is a must in today's competitive market not only for the company to have the competitive edge but to ensure well trained staff is providing compassionate and competent care. Employees who are CDP certified have opportunities for career advancement and accountability as a CDP.

The NCCDP / ICCDP recommends that all educators are certified Alzheimer's disease and Dementia Care Trainers (CADDCT®) through the NCCDP / ICCDP Train the Trainer CADDCT® class. CADDCT trainers must use the most up-to-date training materials.

The NCCDP / ICCDP recognizes the importance of educated and certified dementia unit managers and certifying the Dementia Unit Managers as Certified Dementia Care Managers (CDCM®). Dementia Unit Managers report, "They have received little training as a Dementia Unit Managers and many state they do not have current policies and procedures for dementia units."

NCCDP / ICCDP provide Alzheimer's disease and Dementia Care training to First Responders and Law Enforcement educators and certification as Certified First Responder Dementia Trainers®.

The International Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners was formed in 2012 to support the International community who also seek Alzheimer's disease and dementia education and dementia certification for their front line staff and health care professionals.

The National Council of Certified Dementia Practitioners®, LLC was formed in 2001 by a group of professionals with varying work and personal experiences in the field of dementia care. The Council was formed to promote standards of excellence in dementia and Alzheimer's disease education to professionals and front line staff and other service providers who provide services to dementia clients. As the number of dementia cases continue to increase nationally and worldwide, there is a great necessity to ensure that care givers are well trained to provide appropriate, competent, sensitive direct care and support for the dementia patient. The goal of the NCCDP / ICCDP is to develop and encourage comprehensive dementia education, standards of excellence in the health care profession and compassionate delivery of dementia care services by health care professionals and front line staff.
